MONEY .- BY H. C. CAREY. A lecture was delivered in the Chapel of New-York University on Thursday evening, on the subject of "Money," by Henry C. Carey of Philadelphia. Mr. Carey remarked that the universal interest in gold and silver, which was felt in every civilized commun ty, was owing to certain distinctive qualities in those materials which brought them into direct connection with the distinctive qualities of man, and made them the indispensable instruments of society and commerce. For this purpose they possess an adaptation which can be found in no other production of nature Requiring much labor for their production on account Requiring much labor for their production on account of their scanty diffusion, they represent a large amount of value. Of comparatively little bulk in themselves, they can be easily transported from place to place, and securely stored. They are not liable to rust or damage, and can be preserved uninjured for any length of time. Their quantity is much less hable to variation than is that of wheat and corn, the supply of which is largely contingent on the state of the weather. Their power of minute subdivision ints them for the performance of the smallest as well as the largest exchanges. The price of a commodity depends on its power to command money in exchange. Prices file thate with changes of time and place. Cotton commands in our country thrice the quantity of sitver that would be given for it in another. At the Rocky Mountains, a thousand tune of rage would not exchange for the smallest piece of silver, while at the same place mould be given for it in another. At the Rocky Mountains, a thousand tuns of rags would not exchange for the smallest piece of silver, while at the same place a quire of paper would command a price of at least an ounce in weight. Passing thence towards the East, and arriving at the plains of Kansas, their relative values, measured in silver, would have changed so much that the price of the rags would have changed so much that the price of the rags would have changed so much that the price of the rags would pay for many reams of the paper. A farther change would be experienced on coming to St. Louis. Rags would rise still fartner, and paper fall. Such would be the case at every step of the progress cas ward, until at length in the heart of Missachusetts three pounds of rags would be found to comment more silver than would be needed for the purchase of a pound of paper. This illustrates a general is v, that is, he price of raw materials tends to rice as we approach those places in which wealth most exists—those in which man is most combied to associate with his fellowman. The prices of finished commodities move in a direction precisely the reverse—always declining as those of raw materials advance. Both, accordingly, tend to approximate, the highest prices of the one being always found in connection with the lowest of the other. The strength of the movement in that direction is the most conclusive evidence of advancing civilization. Thus, cotton is low in price at the plantation and high in Manchester and Lowell, while coth is cheaper in Lowell than it is in Alabama or Louisiana. Com in Illinois is frequently so cheap that a bustlet is piven in exchange for the silver required to pay for a yard of the coatsest cloth, while at Manchester it is seder that it pays for a dozen yards. The same results are obtained if we look backward in time. At the close of the fifteenth century, eight ecclesiasted at tending the funeral of Anne of Brittany, were royally entertained at a cost of about three frances of power of the pr

and was, increase, another with the production among men, and the consequent increase of wealth and civilization, raw material rises in price. All the productions of the earth are in their turn flaished commonly and row material. Coal and tron ore see the finished commonly of the miner, and yet they are only the raw material of which pig true is made. The latter is the finished commodity of the smeler, and yet it is but the raw material of the puddler and of him who rolls the par. In the early stages of society, land and labor are very low in price, and the richest exposits of coal and ore are workless. It is only with the advance of social combination that they acquire value. The more finished a commodity, the greater is the tendency to a fall of price. In the days when the French peasant would have been required to give an oxfor a ream and a list of paper, who was much higher than it is at present peaches were entirely unathalicable, the finer vegetacies now in the word utterly unknown, a piece of refused larger or a cup of ten and able, the most vegetacies how in the were afterly and known, a piece of refused sugar or a cup of tea and coffee were luxuries fit for kings alone. Now with the price of an oxide larmer can purchase better when than then was drunk by sings, he can obtain not only paper but books and newspapers, he can eat apricots and peaches; sugar, ten and coffee are necessaries of his life, and he can have a supply of linen that would once have almost sufficed for the entire homsehold of a once have aimset sufficed for the entire household of a nobleman. Such are the results which arise from the facility of association among men. The instrument to which they are the most tadebted for the power to combine their efforts is noney.

Mr. Carcy then wont into an elaborate discussion of the circumstances under which the power to command money increases, and those under which it declines. Raw materials, he maintained tend toward these contrains a which made against a most provesithese countries in which employments are most giversi-ned, in which the pover of association the most exists, ard in which land and labor tend most to rise in price. The procious metals tend toward the same countries. at a in them the most timished commodities are least in price. Af crillustrating these points with great felicity and force Mr. Carey devoted the remainder of his lattine to a profound exposition, in various points of view, of the influence of the precious metals on the promotion of individuality on the one hand, and of association on the other.

HOT-AIR FURNACES-MEETING OF INSUR-ANCE COMPANIES.

A meeting of delegates from the various Insurance Companies in this city was held yesterday afternoon at the office of the Lenox Fire Incurance Company in Wall street. The object of the meeting was for the purpose of taking some action for the greater security of the Companies against losses by fires occasioned by the imperfect or careless construction of hot sir furnaces. There was a large number of delegates present. Mr. Hibband, of the Bowery Insurance Company, acted as Chairman. The Committee appointed at the last meeting submitted the following provisions, which were adopted, viz:

The outer walls of cold air chambers to be eight inches in thickness, with an eight inch arch turned over the same, and squared up level, with solid masonry and diagoing placed over the same, the full size of the fur-nace, the top of flars to be one fact below the under-side of the beams, and left for circulation of air over the same. the same.

Mr. J. G. Pierrson thought it would be advisate to have a committee appointed on furnices and the general construction of houses.

Mr. White was in favor of the a pointment of an agent for this purpose.

Mr. Smith favored the appointment of the committee, and an agent to act under their instructions.

Mr. Horrs said this matter of furnaces was brought before the Association some two years since. Had an agent been employed to inspect furnaces, the said everything connected with heating buildings, he had no doubt but that hundreds of thousands of dollars would have been say d.

The following resolution was adopted.

Resolved, that a Cor suling Committee of five be appointed an appearance, the construction of buildings and heating appearance.

The tollowing named gentlemen were appointed said Committee: J. G. Pierson, A. B. McDonald, John M. Smith, Geo. B. Satterly and Wm. Tacker.

INVESTIGATION INTO THE AFFAIRS OF THE MAN HATTAN GAS COMPANY.

The Special Committee of the Board of Councilmen appointed to inquire into the sifiairs of the Manhattan Gas Company, met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon pussuant to acjournment, and resumed the investigation.

Gas Company, met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon pursuant to adjoin ment, and resumed the investigation.

Mr. Roome, President of the Company, was re-called and testified as follows: The amount of coal used in the last quarter of 1855 was 5-88 tune of Caucal, of which 105 tune was Athert Cannel, and 5-078 Eogush Connel. We used 12 823 tune of caking coal, of suich 2.697 were Newcastle, and 10-126 American. During the last of quarter of 1856 we used 6-741 tune Cannel, of which 302 were Albert, 6438 English; and 13,507 Newcastle. No American was used. In Ortober, 1855 and 56, the proportions of coal used were the same—35 per cent Cannel in each case. In Noven ber, 755 and 56, the proportions were also the same—33 per cent of Cannel. In Dec., 1856, we raised from 1 to 4 Cannel, which proportion has been used from it at time till November. The greatest pressure in the last quarter of 1856 was 21 lebes. On the 7740 Cet., 1856, the pressure was increased to 3 inches at the works and 28-10 inches at the works in that of 1856. The stimes stated the amounts of pressure in various parts of the city in May, 1855, and Feb., 1857, when the pressure was 28-10 inches at the Gas Works it was 19-10 at Hammond street, and 1 at Spring street. We could not have diminished the pressure was not varied to compel customers to born more gas than they required or had consumed in 1855. The effect of lowering the pressure now would be not to turnish gas enough. At most points there would be a complaint of an insufficient supply. The effect of a reduction in the price of gas upon the consumetion is to cause an increase. Toe with as indeed to a develop not only got a greater number of customers, but that those who could afford it generally burn it more lavithat those who could afford it generally burn it more lavithat those who could afford it generally burn it more lavithat those who could afford it generally burn it more lavithat reduction in the price of yas upon the consumition is to cause an increase. The witness finds that the Company pot only got a greater number of cust mers, but that those who could afford it generally burn it more lavidable. On the process we derived benefit from the red evinon because the Company famish better gas than before, and the pressure on their burners is no greater than it was. A great many have not only a nailer bills, but burn less gas than before the reduction. With mers believed that the great cause of a mplaint acceptance of the process of the summer of the man error; that customers take the December bill, multiply it by three, and suppose that the result gives the amount consumed during the quarter. Such is not the case. Since this investigation commenced many who would not have thought of compaining have imagined they had been overcharged. There never was a Gas Company that he ever had beard of where 20 000 bills were made every in this as many complaints. In this instance complaining parties, by comparing their bills for the last quarters of 1855 and 1856, had become satisfied. Since the reduction, the increased manufacture had been 24 per cent; and by the comparison of increased manufacture with increased receipts, there is shown 15 per cent profit to the consumer.

Compaints are always most numerous at this time of and by the comparison of increased manufacture with increased receipts, there is shown 15 per cent profit to the consumer.

Complaints are always mest numerous at this time of year. As the nights grow longer the complaints increase. Hence very few complaints from Spring to Fall. By comparing the increased quantity of gas manufactures since the remetion with the increased receipte, the result shows 15 per cent profit to the consumer. To increase the pressure from 1 an increase to 1 inch wold increase the velocity of the discharge 29 per cent; if increased from 1 inch to 11 inches, about 21 per cent; and from 21 inches to 3 inches 91 per cent. The reduction in the price of gas on the 1st of O tober, 1856, produced such an increased demand between the 1st and 7th of October as required an additional as inch of pressure at the works. The per cent age of increase, but not the actual increase, was greater before the reduction than after it. Have no record of the pressure in various parts of the city for the last three menths in 1856, that this witness knows of. In speaking of the per centage of increased increase to the Company, refer nee is had exclusively to the registered gas which is sold by the meters, and not to the street lamps. Witness thought that there was bathirde leakage in home pipes. The compact are of gas in the pipes is not a matter of much moment.

A lengthy debate took place netween Mr. Witliard counter for the Company and Mr. Botts, course for pipes is not a matter of much moment.

A lengthy debate took place between Mr. Williams course for the Company, and Mr. Boizs, course for the Committee, as to the propiety of inquiring whether the Commany bave been in the habit of charging 25 cents per mouth for the use of the met is, although the Legislaure, in the set of 1855 provides that gas should be farmished at $2.50 m housand feet. that gas should be termined at $2.50 in non-send exist. Mr. Boiss thought the question was one of great importance and not so small as the opposing coursel represented. They had found out that there were 20,000 con musrs, and the charge of 25 cents a month for the use of a meter to each amounted to no small Perding the discussion, the Committee adjourned till Wednesday next, at 2 p. m.
